CAUSE PANIC IN STREETS

Women Caught Unawares as Clouds Open, Drenched to Skin, Seek Refuge Through Every Door.

A small-sized cloudburst, preceded by a five-minute eighty-four-mile-an hour gale and period of midnight blackness, visited the city at 5.04 this evening and caused widespread panic.

Thousands of toilers, most of them women umbrelialess and arrayed in midsummer flimsy garments, were caught in the downpour and drencted to the skin.

The vortex of the onrush for safety was in the vicinity of the World Building. In the darkness the shelter seekers seemed to lose their bearing and blindly made for the first doorway. They rushed helter-skelter into every doorway in sicht. In many barrooms drinking men were crowded against the rails by girls who pushed through the doors in a blind rush to seek shelter from the rain, which was falling in

SAYS DIVORCED WIFE

Mme. Gueydan Denies Under Oath She Gave the "Thy Joe" Letters to Slain Editor, Though She Had Copies.

"CAILLAUX HAS NO HONOR!" WOMAN SHOUTS TO JURORS.

Admits She Has Other Love Missives, Which She Vows Premier Gave Her Before Their Divorce.

PARIS, July 23.—Scenes that beggar the most impassioned meloo drama marked the trial to-day of Mme. Henriette Caillaux, wife of the former Prime Minister and Minister of Finance of France, charged with the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro.

Mme. Gueydan, who divorced her first husband to wed Caillaux, and whom Caillaux later divorced that he might himself marry Mme. Raynouard-the present Mme. Caillaux-took the stand, and amid the cheers of the spectators, denounced Mme. Caillaux as "the intruder who defiled my home to take my place." Mme. Gueydan swore solemnly that she did not give to Calmette the intimate letters Mme. Raynouard had written Caillaux before he was divorced. She admitted she had other similar love epistles, but refused to give them to the prosecutor, finally delivering them to Maitre Labori

Mme. Caillaux's lawyer, to do with as he wished. "You are trying to make me responsible for the crime," she shouted passionately. "You seek extenuating circumstances. All that has been said by the accused (Mme. Caillaux) and by M. Caillaux has been false." she added, when charged with being the intrigante behind Calmette and the person responsible for the shooting because she gave Calmette the famous "Thy Joe" letters written by Caillaux to Mme. Raynouard while Caillaux was still the husband of Mme. Gueydan.

Begging protection from the court, the sad faced little woman shouted: "I am alone. I have no husband to defend me," and she gazed straight at the woman who had stolen her husband's love and name.

She swore that even before she suspected Caillaux wanted to divorce her, the Minister had given her a satchel full of love letters from his mistress, who later became his second wife. She did not read them, she swore. She discovered Caillaux's intrigue with Mme. Raynouard, she said, only when Caillaux himself, on bended knees, confessed it and begged o forgiveness, which for a time she o granted, because, she said, she "thought she saw the bottom of his heart through his tears."

She admitted she kept the "Thy Joe" letters because she did not "want to be unarmed in the divorce," adding: "I had to defend myself against the Machiavellian manoeuvres of an unfaithful husband. He asked me to give my word of honor I had destroyed the letters, but I did not do so, nor did I ask his word of honor, because I knew he had no honor." Following the testimony of Mms. Gueydan, Maitre Labori was smiling and confident. "I am now certain of an acquittal," he declared.

Mme. Caillaux took her place in the prisoners' inclosure punctually at noon. She carried in her right hand a little vial of smelling salts and a

0 notebook. Two minutes afterward the red-robed Judges filed into court. Joseph Caillaux and his friend. Pascal Ceccaldt, had visited the prisoner in the Conciergerie before the
